The Kitchen to Present Half Straddle's HERE I GO, PT. 2 OF YOU

The reclamation of spaces, ideas, and paradigms by female-identified and informed bodies and queer bodies embodying feminist ethos must be made paramount at this moment in American Life.

Led by Half Straddle's Artistic Director, Tina Satter, Here I Go, pt. 2 of You is a two-week open work period and colloquy, encompassing rehearsals and showings of new theater and video work; the launch of an online journal of performance writing; public lectures; and communal zine-making activities that will act as accessible discussion periods.

The program will feature a series of lectures by some of today's key figures in the performance world, including Half Straddle writer / director Jess Barbagallo, novelist Sarah Schulman, poet Claudia Rankine, and playwright Branden Jacobs-Jenkins. At this crisis moment in leadership and freedom, where human rights are feeling under threat, speakers will touch on what performance means, why performances are made, and what the making of art means now. The series will also explore feminism in performance and trans identity politics, engaging company members, peers, and their artistic heroes to expand critical artistic discourse to interrogate and reflect on how we codify.

Half Straddle has spent the last ten years carving out a space for females and queer people in performance, challenging preconceptions on how performance can be thought of and experienced. As the non-performative lectures will invite artists to communicate a standpoint of clear ideas, the series will be framed with live music, and access to open rehearsals. Expanding on the themes that will be explored in the speaker series, these rehearsals will offer an additional viewpoint into the meaning of performance, and provide a unique exposure to the process of early work.

The zine-making workshop will be led by Half Straddle design collaborators, aimed at kids and teens to demonstrate the history of the zine as a mode of communication in the art world. The series will be running in conjunction with the launch of Half Straddle's online journal of New Writing on Performance and Art called Here You Go 2 which will be available online at www.halfstraddle.com. This debut issue will feature writing from: Jess Barbagallo, Jim Fletcher, Ariel Goldberg, Julia May Jonas, Erin Markey, Jordan Martin and Michael Breslin.
