Choices

Lynne Tillman/Kelvin James: "When Ruth took off her engine bra, and her breasts fell from those white cotton cups, flat and sagging, like her life, Grace thought, exactly the life she didn't want, contained in that body."—from Tillman's Haunted Houses. Mercilessly honest and intelligent, Tillman reads from her just-finished novel, Motion Sickness. James, a new voice from the Harlem literary community, reads new short fiction. March 13 at 8:30, the Kitchen, 512 West 19th Street, 255-5793. (Stone)
