Too Many Clothes: What's a Woman to Do?

Comedienne/actress/writer Linda Hill will present Too Many Clothes, a new one woman show at The Kitchen for three performances only beginning February 15. As an added bonus, Hill invites audience members to clean out their own closets and bring the discards to the show. Donated clothing will be added to the piles of wearables that make up the set and then given to a worthy charity after the run.

Too Many Clothes is a multimedia performance which attempts to answer that age old question, "Do clothes make the woman?" This new show blends

Hill's improvisational comedy, her witty character portrayals and her love of fashion with video footage of various people's closets, a kiddie paper doll fashion show and a display of clothing in The Kitchen's gallery.

An avid collector of fashions from the turn of the century to the present day, Hill's characters are as diverse as the costumes they wear.

Too Many Clothes will be presented at The Kitchen, 512 West 19th Street (between 10th & 11th avenues). Performances are at 8 p.m. February 15, 16 and 17. Tickets are $12.

Information and reservations for events at The Kitchen may be obtained by calling 212-255-5793.
