Equipment note: The Moog drum is an electro-acoustical transducer that produces a short trigger and a control voltage change when the drum head is struck. The actual sound of the impact is transduced to produce a control voltage proportional to the loudness. This control voltage and trigger are then used to control a sound produced by the synthesizer. The harder the drum is struck, the higher the control voltage produced.
