The Kitchen presents a new dance/theater piece by Michael Portnoy

May 12, 2006 – The Kitchen presents a new dance-theater piece by Michael Portnoy. Told through a series of tightly choreographed and often humorous scenes, each based on a particular joke, The K Sound explores broad cultural assumptions, stereotypes, and prejudices embedded in a joke's content and structure. Set to a lush, convulsive electro-acoustic score, The K Sound features a diverse cast of performers, including dancers, actors, non-performers, and singers, as well as a wide range of performance styles, ranging from micro-choreography to behavioral movement. Performances will take place at The Kitchen (512 West 19th Street), on June 8-10 (Thursday – Saturday) at 8pm. Admission is $12.

Portnoy's form of stand-up infuses the structure of the jokes – gathered from around the world - with operatic beauty, sadness, and tragedy, and utilizes a primal humor that straddles the line between horror, humor, and suspense. The music score unites the jokes with the dance, song, text, lighting, and set: its idiosyncratic timing emphasizes the feeling of unpredictability in the choreography.

The performance features performers David Adamo, Willa Carroll, Walter Gambín, John King, Sarah Michelson, Chethwith Murosian, Johnnie Moore, Natasha Papadopoulou, Michael Portnoy, Elisa Santiago, Pete Simpson, Jeremy Wade and others, a set designed by visual artist Robert Melee, and music composed and accompanied live by Pete Drungle.
