Gina Bonati/Mike Tyler:

In her frequent collaborations with painter Liz Castagna, poet-dancer-artist Bonati plays with long, crumpled sheets of white paper: dancing with them, smearing charcoal on them, and chanting the words the rest of us can't see.

Tonight, in addition to dancing and reading, the East Village Renaissance gal will also sing with a band. Tyler is the bad boy of the Downtown poetry scene: an impudent imp with a contagious lust for life. Excerpts from his new book From Colorado to Georgia appear in this week's music section. Sun at 7. (McDonnell)
